A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

THE ADVERTISEMENT OF THE CARSON SOAP WORKS which appears in to-day's STATE JOURNAL was composed and written by no one before ever the manager or workman of the Carson Soap Works knew what a piece of soap was. I am surprised at L. S. Greenlaw appropriating an advertisement written by a person not having charge of the educational interests of a certain portion of our State. Were I connected with institutions of learning I would not appropriate the simple composition of a hard-handed son of toil, endeavoring to advance my own interests.

THE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION.

Various Exhibits by States—What Each Shows to the Best Advantage—"France" Contemplables—Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13, 1876.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—The greater portion of the mineral exhibits made by the States east of the Rocky Mountains are displayed in two buildings erected for that purpose adjacent to the Main Building of the exhibition. These buildings are known as the "mineral annexes." No. 1, or the principal building of the two is about 600 feet in length by 30 in width. When everything to be exhibited here is properly arranged the display will be quite attractive. At present there is considerable confusion so that those sections which are quite ready cannot be seen with much satisfaction, on account of the dirt and noise made by the carpenters and other workmen. Entering this building at the western end, we find considerable space unoccupied as yet by any exhibitor, and the first occupied section filled with some furniture not worth noticing. The first display worthy of attention at this end of the building is a model of a

RAILROAD BRIDGE,

Exhibited by the American Bridge Company of Chicago, Ill., and close beside it two immense blocks of anthracite coal from Hickory colliery, Schuylkill Co., Pa., are exhibited by a firm of Philadelphia coal merchants, who also distribute without charge a very interesting pamphlet on the coal trade of the world, its production, etc., with valuable statistics worth preserving.

DELAWARE

Makes the next exhibit. This consists of one small case which contains a few inferior mineral specimens and a few relics of the stone age. On some open shelves are shown some fine samples of bog iron ore, marble, serpentine, granite, feldspar, asbestus and kaolin and in the same section some more blocks of coal from Pennsylvania.

INDIANA

Has the next section. The collection from this State is very creditable and has been well arranged. It consists of samples of iron ores, with small sections of rails made therefrom, cannel and coking coals, kaolin, Hindostan oil stones from Paoli, Orange county, samples of the different building stones, shoe rubber sandstones, oolitic limestones, glass globes containing different kinds of clays and some specimen tools of the stone age.

IOWA

Gives a very complete and handsome view of the geological stratification of the rocks of that State. This is the very best and most instructive exhibit of this class made by any country or State represented in the exhibition. A vertical section of the entire State 3,700 feet in thickness is shown. This presents the lowest formation of the State as it crops out on the Mississippi river at McGregor, with all the intermediate strata to the drift formation as found at Council Bluffs on the Missouri river. The actual substance of each stratum is shown with its thickness given in figures. This exhibit has been very skillfully arranged, so that the different sections of it appear as if they had been cut out of the rocks just as they are shown. This has been done by imbedding one side of the rocks in a long narrow frame filled with cement, the other side is covered with glass and shows only the rock. There are twelve of these glass frames or columns stationed in proper geological order. In the galena limestone, 250 feet thick, are shown chunks of pure galena, which represent very plainly the nature and position of this class of lead ores in limestone. One can see here exactly in what manner lead deposits "peter out," and how they are found again. The fossiliferous limestones of the Dewnian age are very prettily shown as also the thickness and character of the coal veins of the carboniferous. In addition to this geological display there are some fine dressed blocks of the building stones of the State, samples of coal, beautiful quartz geodes, a magnificent display of large cubes of crystallized galena with specimens of other classes of lead ores. A large case is filled with skeletons of the "Mound Builders" and their stone implements. In a glass case by itself is a very curious specimen, supposed to be the body of a HUMAN BEING.

The head and limbs are wanting, but the ribs and bones are seen. This specimen was found imbedded in the soil in the vicinity of some mineral springs. In some glass vessels are also exhibited here the different varieties of the sands and ochres. Iowa exhibits in Agricultural Hall soils from 35 counties, 6 feet in thickness, taken from the four corners and centre of the State. This dirt pressed into tall glass pillars is quite an attractive feature of Iowa's display. This State also displays here 300 varieties of fruits in wax casts, which are so well executed that it requires a very close examination before one can determine that they are not natural. We saw a country man examine some of the apples who was quite indignant when told that they were not genuine apples.

WISCONSIN

Makes her display next to Iowa in the Mineral Annex. Several cases contain geological specimens, which are very well arranged, but after examining those in Iowa, the Wisconsin collection does not appear at all interesting. There is a case here filled with pre-historic copper tools and flint arrow and spear-heads which show to better advantage. Then there are some specimens of galena and the different iron ores, dressed blocks of various building stones, and varieties of clay moulded into bricks.

OHIO

Begins with an exhibit of coal, one specimen of which, 12 feet in thickness and weighing 21,000 pounds, represents the thickness of a coal bed in that State which underlies 100,000 acres of land. Here are samples of pig and wrought iron, a geological map of the State, some handsomely dressed blocks of building stones, several glass jars filled with different classes of salt, one jar of lampblack made by the Kokosing oil company from natural gas, specimens of fire bricks. Stone jars from Akron and earthenware, with samples of the clay from which they are manufactured. Several cases are filled with relics of the stone age, this exhibit is made by the State Archeological association, and it is certainly the most complete and vast display of the kind to be found here. Then there is a collection of arrow and spear heads and some of the working implements of pre-historic times, shown by Mr. H. H. Hill of Cincinnati. Mr. T. W. Kinney of Portsmouth, also has an exhibition of a large collection of ancient relics, such as flint, knives, arrow and spear heads, stone implements and earthen pots.

MISSOURI

Shows very systematically in six cases, a fine collection of minerals. They have been well arranged and labelled by Mr. A. E. Foote of Joplin and consist chiefly of lead, iron and zinc ores. The crystals of calamine are quite noticeable, so also those of calcite quartz, iron and copper pyrites. The samples of iron ore are good. The collector has shown good judgment in not filling up a great space with tons of the ore. He has taken representative samples of the different ores from various localities and of a uniform size, consequently he makes the most interesting display of iron ores we have seen. Stuck in here with the Missouri collection a Pennsylvania company has piled up a lot more iron and coal. This may be a good advertisement for Johnstown, but it is not at all interesting to visitors.

MICHIGAN

Comes next with a magnificent display of copper. No other country in the world can equal it. The specimens are well arranged though rather imperfectly labelled. There are also some fine specimens of iron ores, beautiful amethyst crystals a large stock of copper bars, a huge specimen of iron weighs 15 tons, of which 66 8-10 per cent is metallic iron A geological map of the State is exhibited and the Wyandotte Rolling Mills Co. show specimens of boiler plate, iron rails, bars, rods and links. There are also several views taken in the New York iron mine, Lake Superior. One case contains some exceedingly rich and handsome specimens of native silver, copper associated with silver and natural cystals of pure copper. Another case contains skulls and implements of the stone age, another one is filled with fine specimens of gypsum, some jars contain salt and some bottles salt brine, and last there are four masses of native copper from the Central mine, Lake Superior, weighing five tons each, which were taken from a depth of 1150 feet.

PENNSYLVANIA

Has the next section. A big label announces the fact that the exhibit is made by "The Second Geological Survey of Pennsylvania." Here we find a suite of geological specimens, a map of the Wyoming coal field and a model of the same made in wax which was constructed by the geological students of the University of Pennsylvania. Maps showing sections of the coal measures also topographical models of Black-log gap and other sections of the State.

ILLINOIS

finishes this building. This State exhibits a case filled with cereals neatly arranged in glass globes, crystals of galena, specimens of shells from the Industrial University school of natural history, Indian relics, cut blocks of the building stones, about 300 varieties of woods and a large case filled with ears of corn. This finishes our description of Mineral Annex No. 1. We may in another letter tell you what is to be found in the other annex and something about the foreign mineral exhibits.

FRAZER.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

Possibility of the Restoration of the Old Silver Dollar—The Result Would be the Depreciation of Greenbacks.

The Washington correspondent of the Alta sends the following dispatch under the date of the 28th ult.:

The discussion of the silver question in the Senate and House to-day develops unexpected strength in favor of the restoration of the old silver dollar, with full legal tender. The House favors it by a fair majority. The Senate is still undecided. The question raised involves the whole consideration of resumption on a gold basis. If silver dollars are made a legal tender for all amounts, the proposition to resume on a gold basis will be totally abandoned, and the value of greenbacks will be determined by the value of silver dollars, which to-day would be worth only 85 cents, unless Senator Morton's demand—that they be coined equal in value to gold dollars—be accepted. Your correspondent was right in saying, some time ago, that the silver question would turn on side issues. Jones' proposition is supported by those who wish to restore the old silver dollar, in order that the National debt—both bonds and currency—may be paid in silver. The Act of 1869, declaring that the public debt shall be paid in coin, does not specify gold, and at that time the silver dollar was a full legal tender, notwithstanding it was not then in circulation. If this movement succeeds, greenbacks will fall to the value of the silver dollar, and will fluctuate just as silver bullion fluctuated. The greenback now holds a middle ground between gold and silver. Resumption on a gold basis means the appreciation of greenbacks, while silver resumption means their depreciation. Senators are very much in doubt, generally, what course to take to meet the issues presented.

Pyramid — About as little as can be said is that the prospects are almost hourly brightening in all parts of the district and a goodly number of arrivals are noted Messrs Gladding, Brown and McCormick, of Wadsworth have just started a tunnel to cut across the top of the Red Rover ledge at a depth of about 20 feet in order to determine the best point at which to sink a shaft They are already in about four feet of a very fine character of ore In the Monarch the whole face of the tunnel is in ledge matter showing good ore though in all probability it is only a feeder, as from the location of the croppings they will have to run about 100 feet further to cut their to cut the main principal vein

Developments in the vicinity of Butcher's claim from which the rich bromide ore is obtained, are good Several claims have the same character of ore and are being vigorously prospected

Linsley's locations are improving as he sinks down, having widened out from about 4 inches to about 16 or 18 now, still carrying the same bromide ore as on top

The Con Virginia, the first location made in the vicinity of Butcher's claim and immediately north of it owned by W H Salisbury, Hank Rhodes and Larry Hoge, shows well in the croppings and carries the green stain, which will probably develop into bromide ore upon going down In about three weeks the company will commence sinking a shaft to prove their location

The shaft on the Buckeye is going down rapidly—the contractors having put down a little over 50 feet in the past twelve days

Sheriff Jones and Dr Bishop, the "blarsted millionaire" of the Monarch Co, were out a day or two this week looking after their bonanzas and making a few purchases on bromide flat Sunderland will have a job to repair their shoe leather, which must be considerably the worse for wear

The Pavilion for the use of the barbecue next Tuesday, and the trench for cooking the stock, are being made ready for that blow out

Tin Mine — Yesterday we were informed of another mining discovery near Reno. A J Hall and John R Knox have made a location of 3000 feet on a tin ledge situate on the Honey Lake road about 12 miles from Reno The ledge is two feet and a half thick and is well defined About and below the ledge the rock is colored green An assay was made of this green rock, which resulted in giving a result of $24 in silver The tin mine has been christened I X L An incline will be sunk in the middle of the location to prospect each way The croppings are traceable for a distance of 800 feet, and range from a foot to eighteen inches high The specimens shown us look very fine indeed and if it all averages as well the mine will be valuable

Sudden Death — As the Virginia Express train was coming from Steamboat last Thursday evening, Dr Frederick Constoll of Healdsburg, Cal suddenly died of heart disease He was suddenly seized with a spasm and recovering a little he said, "This is the second attack I have had of this kind, I shall die, (and putting his hand on his pocket) Send money to my wife" With that he expired An inquest was held yesterday before Justice Gilson when these facts were ascertained He was a native of Bordeaux, France aged 51 years a graduate of one of the medical colleges of France and a Mason His body and his effects were sent to Healdsburg last night He had $635 10 in his pocket at the time of his death

Election —The following officers of Reno Lodge No 13, I O O F, were elected Thursday night to serve the ensuing term N G, R F Hoy, V G, R Harrison, R Secy, J J Becker Treasurer, D McKay, Trustees, J Hoy J B Williams, D McKay

Pinafore —Don't miss seeing this play to-night at the Reno Opera House by the Piper Opera Company The favorites Miss Badger, J B Ashton and Little Dorritt, with a full company, will no doubt give an entertainment well worth attending

Personal —Mr Ben E Hunter, an old time Renoite, but now Supt of the Schenectady mine, in Alpine county, Cal, was in town yesterday, greeting and being greeted by former friends

Removal —We are moving into our new office This may prevent us from publishing an issue of this paper to-morrow morning But we hope not We shall use our best exertions to appear as usual

Banks to Close —The banking houses of D A Bender and Co and T E Jones & Co will be closed after to-day until Wednesday next All interested should govern themselves accordingly

Commissioners — The Board of County Commissioners will be in session on Monday Those having business with the county will please take notice
